

Dear friends,

I am proud to share with you that my book Life after the Diagnosis: Expert Advice on Living Well with Serious Illness for Patients and Caregivers is available on February 14—Valentine’s Day!

I wrote this book out of love. Love for what I do and love for the people that I try to help through my work in palliative care. This book is about life and how to live. Although it’s written for people with serious illness and those who care about them, it’s not a book about death and dying.

Instead, it is intended to help clear the fog, provide direction, be a resource, and give seriously ill people, their loved ones, and all caregivers a blueprint to follow during difficult and emotionally wrenching times.

This is the book I had always wished was available to recommend to patients with serious illness and their loved ones. I hope you like it and will share it with your family, friends and patients.

You can find Life After the Diagnosis wherever you usually get books- including Green Apple Books on Clement St and Book Passage in Corte Madera.

Please feel free to share this document with folks you think would be interested in Life After the Diagnosis and please follow me on social media.

Thank you for all your support.

All My best,
Steve
